Dear Hiring Team,

I am thrilled to submit my application for the Production Editorial internship offered at Penguin Random House Publishing. Encountering this internship while exploring book publishing internships online, I immediately was drawn to the Penguin Random House name and the chance to immerse myself in the world of publishing.

Currently pursuing a degree in Editing, Writing, and Media at Florida State University, my passion for reading and my desire to learn more about the publishing industry make me a perfect candidate for this internship. I have always loved stories, and I have consumed books with a fiery passion since I was a little girl. That passion carries me through strenuous work and class loads, and it is my dream to work as a fiction editor. I am interested in this internship because I want to learn more about the industry and gain experience as I can.

The classes I have taken have taught me to think critically and enabled me to analyze texts with a nuanced understanding of media and social constructs. I have crafted my editing skills, learning how to give productive criticism on my peers' work and edit my own projects to maximize their potential. I have learned to differentiate my writing style and content for different formats and audiences. I believe these skills that I have been developing throughout my time at Florida State will benefit me in this editorial internship.

As a dedicated and detail-oriented individual, I thrive in environments where precision and excellence are a priority. Whether independently managing tasks or collaborating with peers, I approach every endeavor with enthusiasm and a commitment to delivering exceptional results. Throughout my academic career, I have juggled difficult classes, a part-time job, and extracurricular activities, which has given me strong time management and organizational abilities, ensuring my readiness to excel in an editorial internship.

I am eager to contribute my skills and passion for books to the team at Penguin Random House Publishing and to embark on a journey of growth and discovery within the publishing industry. Thank you for considering my application. I look forward to discussing how my background and aspirations align with your organization's goals.
